There was a time not long ago when a man who had some land was considered fortunate. The story of 'The FIELD' by John B Keane gets to the point of the matter, made famous by the film with Richard Harris and Brenda Fricker .

Another story of the field goes like this.

This farmer had a field that was very fertile and served him and his family all his life. He had three daughters and as tradition allowed, he had to pay for their wedding. In order to pay for them he would grow a large crop to sell at market to pay the bills.

Time moved on and he was getting old and not able to work the field as before. One day he was walking round the field, and he felt a great sense of gratitude for the field and how it served him. Then a sudden realisation came over him and he began to see things in a different way. (Like the elephant last week as he broke loose from his limiting beliefs). He realised that the field was here before him and would be here after him. This led him to see that he never owned the field and that field was a big part of him. The field will always be there while it was him that was coming and going. He saw life from a new perspective, and all was well. God's Spirit is in the world, in every tiny space. Our job is to recognise it.

The One by Patrick Kavanagh

Green, blue, yellow and red –
God is down in the swamps and marshes
Sensational as April and almost incredible the flowering of our catharsis.
A humble scene in a backward place
Where no one important ever looked
The raving flowers looked up in the face
Of the One and the Endless, the Mind that has baulked
The profoundest of mortals. A primrose, a violet,
A violent wild iris – but mostly anonymous performers
Yet an important occasion as the Muse at her toilet
Prepared to inform the local farmers
That beautiful, beautiful, beautiful God
Was breathing His love by a cut-away bog

Matters of some interest.
